HINGRONA SEPTEMBER 4TH. 1986.

In the Supreme Court on Thursday three decision were brought forward, the appellant offence under the Opium Ordinance. Only ment, the case was remanded. one of the cases was gone into, and in that case the Chief Justice, while supporting the entertain grave doubts as to the evidence on a suspicious look-suspicious, that is, against the prosecution - and also remarked subsequently that "it seemed there was not much reliance placed upon the evidence of these excise officers" by the Police. Yet on similar evidence to that which is thus referred to by the Chief Justice convictions are of almost daily occurrence. There is among at the Chinese a widespread feeling of discontent with the proceedings of the excise officers -and, we believe, well founded discontent, the Opium Farmer is entitled to every assist ance in preventing fraudulent dealing in the by the Government, therefore, is how to efficiently protect the revenue without inflicting hardship, injustice, or aunovance on respectable persons. A few years ago a Bill was introduced in the Legislative Council rendering it illegal to sell raw opium in quantities of less than a chest without a licence from the Opium Farmer. The Bil was withdrawn. The reason for this was not explicity stated, but it was understood to be in deference to the protests of the opium dealers, who objected to it at that time very strongly. Early in the present year a Bill was introduced incorporating this powers to the excise officers. The Acting Attorney-General afterwards explained that the provision referring to the side of opium in quantities of less than one chest had been inserted in the Bill by a mistake, and it was withdrawn before the second rending of the Bill. The Acting Attorney-General in relation to the necessity of giving the excise officers additional powers, said: -"It has been dis. He was conveyed to the Tung Wah Hospital. covered that a certain number of junks take on board raw opium, take it outside, boil it, and then bring it back and sell it, thus causing a very great loss to the Opium Farmer." The provision rendering it illegal to sel raw opium in quantities of less than a chest without a licence from the Farmer would, we imagine, be more effective for the protection of additional powers to his officers. It would enable him to keep a watch on all the opium sold in the colony-large sales can be traced without any assistance from the Legislature -and he would thus know where to look for illegal dealing in the prepared article and would be spared the necessity of inflicting on the Chinese community the annoyance caused by much of the present action of the excise officers and their informers. The convenience to the opium importers and licence could not be great, and of two evils it is certainly less than the present system. Any interference in the free course of trade. whether in opium or any other article of commerce, is in itself certainly a thing to be deprecated, but so long as opinm is made a source of revenue so long must of the Government, however, to take such measures for this purpose as shall in-

would fall ononly a few individuals and would be very slight even to them, so long as they intended to deal honestly with the drug, while on the other hand it would, we believe, render it possible to modify to a considerable extent the very objectionable avatem of capionage now maintained. The Opium Farmer, in order to keep as complete a watch as practicable over the trade, boils tions, Indies, Children, and Infants; and for regular all the opium legally boiled in the colony in nse in Warm Climatos, DINNEFOED & Co., Chemists, his own establishment, instead of issuing licences to other boilers, as was formally the practice, so that he can at once recognise illegally prepared opium. With the additional advantage of a record of all sales of the raw drug in small quantities, he would be placed in such a position as would practically the antograph signature of enable him to stamp out the practice label. Sold wholesale by the of taking small quantities of opium outside Proprietors, Worcester; and the colony to boil and bringing them back for Crosse & Blackwell, London. sale surreptitiously. The additional security for the revenue thus afforded would also enhance the future value of the farm. The colony as a whole would thus be a gainer in pocket while the Chinese community annoyance of which great complaints have of late been made.

SUPREME COURT

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION

3rd September.

Before Mr. Justice Russell.

CHARLES FORD V. CHUNG TAI AND TAM SHING. Mr. A. B. Johnson (Crown Solicitor) for the plaintiff Mr. Caldwell for the defendants. This was a claim against the defendants as sureties for contractors to the Botanical and Afforestation Department for the digging of tree pits on the hillside, who had obtained money for work-they had not done, and decamped. At the previous Friday's sitting his Lordship had given question of costs for to-day. Mr. Caldwell again applied for costs, and they

Mr. Bowles (from the office of Messrs. Wotton and Descon) appeared for the plautiff; Mr. Webber (from the office of Mr. Ewens) for Ho Mossop for Chiu Ping Nam, each of whom were defendants in the case. His Lordship now gave judgment in the case. He said two of the defendants Tam Sing Tai and Tang Sing Yuen had not been served being now in custody for debt in the Nam Hoi Prison cerned, he admitted that he was a partner, so there was no dispute as to the claim against him. On behalf of Ho Hung Kee, Ho Hung Kwong, it was set up that he was not a partner, but a considerable amount of evidence had been called to prove that he was a partner, including one of the defendants in the suit, and though most of the witnesses had strong interests of their own to serve in proving him a partner, his Lordship | the Peerage, has been altered by him to Lord swain and a seamen clung to it. The latter two thought the balance of oridence wont to sup- Cross. port that contention. He must—therefore come to the conclusion that Ho Hung Kee was a partner, and give judgment against him. If might be unfortunate that for an interest of $500 in the business he should have to lose so unich money, but that could not be helped. As to Tang Shing Tai, be was no doubt a managing partner, but he was not present, and had not been served. Chui Ping Nam, who was represented by Mr. Mossop, was doubtless a partner in the business although he tried to get out of his responsibility by setting up his nephew as a partner, and jadgment must go against him. Li Po Ting put himself forward as a partner, and there was no difficulty about him. As to Cheung Po Chuk, which Mr. Mossop also represented.

> Yui Ming admitted his liability, and put himself forward as a partner. Some discussion arose as to how judgment was to be executed. A SUBSTITUTE FOR GAOLS.

In view of the recent report I the Hongkong Gaol Commission, the following article by Judge of the Supreme Court of Mauritius, which appeared in the Pall Mall Gasette a short time ago, may be read with interest:-

Some experience as a practising barrister on circuit and in London, and more as one of her mended to the writer the following conclusion and anggestions upon the subject of crime and punishment. They are epitomized as much as possible, in the earnest hope that they may not prove wearisome to the reader and to the thinker; portant to humanity.

Rubinstein is Chinese Imperial Government 1885 Dollar Loan tion, and the long train of distressing symptoms prodigal to excess; he lives, emphatically, en grand seigneur, spending his money royally. Rubinstein is a bezique player, and the following story is told of him in the same paper. Recently, when in Spain, after a grand concert in Toledo, he missed the train to Granada, where he was expected. It was 11 p.m., and the next was expected only at 3 c.m. "What's to be done?" asked his secretary, if you can get one," replied the musician. But sleepy, Rubinstein cast about the station until somebody had been hunted up. It was a railway

At the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall-yard, a paper on the revolver was read recently by Major Kitchener. He dwelt upon the importance of revolver training, maintained that the weapon should be carried on service, and strongly arged the necessity of training officers in its use. The Americans depended very much on the revolver in war, and maintained that it was the payalry weapon par ex-majors, drummers, buglers, and elerks were armed with the weapon. In the French army officers and men were supplied with doublenotion weapons. In Germany there was a regular annual course of instruction and practice. To his mind it was a question for very serious consideration whether our oavalry, armed as at present, would in a cavalry action be any match for an enemy armed with revolvers, as the Russians now were.
